Men aged 18-41 were conscripted into the armed forces to fight in the war, unless they worked in a reserved occupation. Others joined the Home Guard. Air Raid Precaution Wardens volunteered to protect people during air raids. Men who refused to be conscripted were known as Conscientious Objectors.

Women took on new roles during WW2. These included working in factories, joining an armed service (ATS, WRNS and WAAF), working on farms to produce food in the Women's Land Army, or joining the Women's Volunteer Service. Some women became Special Operations Executives to spy for the country.

Children were evacuated to Cambridgeshire from urban areas such as London.

Due to the geography of Cambridgeshire, many airbases were built during WW2 (including Duxford, Oakington and Waterbeach) and land was used to grow food for the war effort.
